

LYNDON DOG POUND
P.O. Box 167 ♦ Lyndonville, VT 05851
802-626-PAWS

Annual Report 2016

Though numbers were up slightly from last year it was a fairly slow and uneventful year. The dog population went from 17 to 25 and the cats from 21 to 23. Oh, and one rabbit.

Pig wrestling is the only thing that comes to mind as a highlight for this past year. Three little pigs had wandered off to a neighbors house to offer some free rototilling. By the time myself and my two swine wrangling assistants had arrived the three piggies had disappeared. Though they did a fine job of turning up the sod. After aborting the search and just getting back home, a call came in that they were down the road offering more free excavating. So I called in the troops again and headed out. The young pigs were fairly friendly and seemed to respond well to my Ritz crackers; you grab what you can on the fly, I don't typically carry pig grain in my truck. But trying to herd them into a trailer is a whole other story. I remember it being a chilly fall afternoon and by the time darkness set in we had only captured one pig and all worked up quite a sweat! Needless to say, we later found out that those three little pigs had wandered back home and we were trying to catch them on their own property. Oh well, just another chapter in the book of animal control.

SPAY NEUTER VACCINATE LICENSE

Cindy Cady
Animal Control Officer

